International Biotechnology Company

Agile Transformation and Application Development

Customer

An international Biotechnology company that offers a broad portfolio of solutions.

Challenge

The client is on a multi-year journey to modernize their technology products to lead the industry with their solutions. They partnered with Dewpoint to help transform their traditional application development processes into an Agile-based approach and to supplement their team with experienced application developers.

Solution

Dewpoint assembled a team of experienced application developers and a certified Agile Scrum Master. In partnership with the client, this team implemented the key principles of a scrum-based methodology and developed new software products and systems to support business needs.

Results

Comprehensive Strategic Plan

- Better visibility to view and prioritize the work to be completed

- Flexible resource model to align resources to product releases of highest priority

- Improved products through technology consulting

- Frequent feature releases introduced features to customers consistently

- Partnership with hardware/firmware vendors improved collaboration and speed to market

- Introduced automated testing practices resulting in quicker discovery of defects with less rework
